

BUSINESS STRATEGY PRINCIPAL — GO-TO-MARKET & COMMERCIALIZATION

Protect It. Monitor It. Find It.

A commercialization strategy for FedEx Monitoring & Intervention and Sensor Solutions

Chris Cannon

Candidate Presentation — July 17, 2026

Turn a disjointed product set into one platform — the same bet FedEx just made elsewhere

“Nearly $10 billion in healthcare transportation revenue exiting FY26.” — FedEx Q4 FY26 earnings call. (~11% of FY26’s $94.7B total revenue.)

“Protect it”

FedEx Surround

High-value, time-sensitive shipments needing active, expert-led intervention.
Embeds SenseAware ID at top tiers.

“Monitor it”

SenseAware Mobile

Condition-sensitive shipments needing continuous, self-managed environmental data.

Find It — RFID: Internal Visibility Infrastructure (Emerging Customer Capability)

Position as one coherent platform — FedEx Intelligent Logistics — where Protect It and Monitor It already share a proven commercial motion.

RFID is architected in deliberately as it matures — not forced into false equivalence with the other two.

In July 2026, FedEx consolidated fragmented healthcare capability under one organization. This presentation asks for the same discipline here — across pricing, packaging, and positioning.

One shared language, not one forced ladder

Pricing evolved as three separate systems, plus a fourth product with no pricing model yet. Surround and SenseAware Mobile answer different questions — forcing one ladder onto both would be artificial.

ASSISTED — FedEx Surround

FedEx's team acts on your behalf

Select = visibility only. Preferred = in-network intervention. Premium = out-of-network, white-glove recovery, embedded SenseAware ID.

SELF-DIRECTED — SenseAware Mobile

You act on the data yourself

Subscription = recurring, self-managed monitoring. Single Journey = one-off, low-friction way in — the trial entry point.

Separately, how customers commit to paying varies too — Surround is contract-based; SenseAware Mobile offers Subscription or Single Journey. Same discipline, different structure, because they solve different problems.

Two naming fixes worth calling out: Priority Alert predates Surround's platform build and should fold in. And “SenseAware” currently names two different things — a bundled Surround feature and a standalone product — which blurs the line for sales and customers alike.

Subscription-first, guardrail intact. Strengthen the nudge from Single Journey to Subscription — but keep Single Journey available. Low-frequency, high-value shippers who lose that option may go to a competitor instead.

One story, built on what already works

“FedEx doesn’t just ship your shipment. We protect it.”

Sales enablement:

A starting decision framework, not a finished rulebook — industry against shipment sensitivity, initial tier recommendation at the intersection. Refined over time using real shipment volume, intervention frequency, and tenure data by tier.

Accelerate trial, prove value, reward loyalty

Customer value and business outcomes aren't consistently measured or communicated today — that's the problem these four steps solve.

Two proactive additions — named, not generic:

M Priority Alert migration path

Consolidating Priority Alert means real customers on a real product need an explicit migration path — not a flip of a switch. This is an adoption problem, not just a pricing one.

R Pre-build RFID's funnel now

RFID is heading toward a customer-facing product. Build the same trial-to-subscription motion for it today, so it launches with commercial discipline instead of needing to be fixed later.

Four metrics, each tied to a specific move in this strategy

ADOPTION RATE

% of eligible shipment volume using M&I or Sensor products

SUBSCRIPTION CONVERSION

% of Single Journey users converting to a subscription

LEGACY MIGRATION RATE

NEW

% of Priority Alert accounts transitioned to the unified platform tier

NET REVENUE RETENTION

Revenue retained plus expansion at renewal — the outcome metric

Subscription conversion shouldn't be static — test trial length, milestone timing, and incentive structure systematically, not just track the number.
